Craigavon, the residence of Captain Craig, M.P., one of the leaders of the Irish Unionists, where Sir Edward Carson is staying, is closely guarded by Ulster volunteers. Men are posted at the entrances, and all persons desiring admission have to show their credentials before passing through. There are also field telephones, by means of which every gate is connected. Inside the house Sir Edward and his lieutenants, in conjunction with General Richardson, are studying maps and plans. Dispatch-rider Randall Webb (seen in the picture with General Richardson) has left Belfast with important dispatches for Mr. Bonar Law.—(Daily, Mirror photographs.)

SEVENTY CAVALRY OFFICERS AT IRISH CAMP RESIGN.

The King Curtails Cheshire Visit Owing to Crisis.

PREMIER'S BUSY DAY

Brigadier-General Summoned from Dublin to War Office.

PARADE ABANDONED.

Is this the eve of Civil War?

The menacing shadow of strife hangs over the country, and the record of the past few hours is a record of alarums and excursions, of troops hastily rushed into Ireland's Unionist province, hastily rushed into Ireland's Unionist province, of warships hovering around Belfast Harbour, and of great generals and statesmen holding private audiences with the Sovereign.

The King is keeping in close touch with every development, and yesterday, received Mr. Asquith, Colonel Seely (Secretary for War) and Field-Marshal Sir John French. Last night it was stated that the King and Queen will-curtail their visit to Knowsley this week, and will return to London on Thursday after visiting Chester, Port Sunlight, Birkenhead and Wallasey.

The King, it is announced by Lord Derby, will not visit Liverpool races.

PRIVATE SHOT BY SENTRY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

DUBLIN, March 21.—Not since the order was received to get ready for the South African campaign has there been such excitement as there was to-day at the Curragh Camp, the largest military centre in Ireland.

Craigavon, near Belfast, where Sir Edward Carson is in residence. A flag-pole has been placed on the lawn in front of the house and a large Union Jack flies from its head—("Daily Mirror" photograph.)

Small quantities had been missing some time before, and that describe the guards at this and other stational could be the guards at this and other stational that the shortage was so considerable. The stock was today replenished from the surplus at the Artillery Barracks in Newbridge.

READY TO FACE ULSTER "HAZARD."

Mr. Lloyd George's Emphatic Speech on Home Rule Crisis.

GOVERNMENT 'RESOLUTE.'

"I am here on behalf of the British Government to say this to you: We mean to confront this deflance of popular liberties with resolute and unwavering determina-tion, whatever the hazard may be."

These grave, emphatic words were spoken by Mr. Lloyd George in the course of a remarkable speech at Huddersfield on Saturday afternoon on the Ulster crisis.

the Ulster crisis.

They were confronted with the greatest issue raised in the history of this country since the days of the Stuarts, declared the Chancellor.

Representative government in this land was at stake. (Cheers.) It was a question whether progressive Bills, supported by the democracy of the country, if opposed by the Topy Party, were to into the waste-paper basket:

The Tory Party had two answers to the question. The first an-wer was they would not allow Liberal progressive legislation to pass, and the second answer was if they did pass they would refuse to obey them.

"We are not fighting about Ulster and we are not fighting about Home Rule. We are fighting for all that is essential to civil liberty in this land."

Reterring to Sir E. Carson's attitude, Mr. Lloyd George said it was a new doctrine of optional obedience—that was, that what might be the fashion for a duke to-day might be the fashion for a poacher for a duke to-day might be the Iashion for a power-to-morrow.

He (Mr. Lloyd George) had deprecated the breach of the law by people who were fighting for the franchise for women, but in all seriousness if Mr. Bonar Law ever got into power, what moral right would he have to punish those people?

The Opposition were on a slippery slope and they had the most to lose.

The right to pass a statute of the realm involved the right to enforce it. He was 'all for Ireland's control of the co

"Well, if you don't exclude Ulster, give us the referendum."

The Opposition had rejected the Government's ofter with contempt and indignation and would resist it by bloodshed if necessary, but they said: "Il instead of giving us a chance of obtaming the opinion of the electorate twice you should give us a chance of obtaming the opinion of the electorate twice you should give us a chance of obtaming it once we will accept it."

He did not say that there were not several men among the Unionist leaders who thoroughly realised all the responsibility and would not offer a settlement at grave risk of civil disturbance, but there were mea behind them who had rushed them during recent years from one wild plunge to another.

Man Was Sentenced to Death.

The mysterious murder in her Glasgow flat of Miss Marion Gilchrist, a wealthy woman, is being reinvestigated on the instructions of the Secretary for Scotland.

Miss Gilchrist was found murdered on December 1, 1908. A man named Oscar Slater was traced to New York and arrested.

He was convicted of the murder and sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to penal of the converse of the sentence was commuted to penal of the top of the the sentence was commuted to penal of the converse of the sentence was commuted to penal there is evidence, it is stated, that Slater could not have been in the flat when Miss Gilchrist was killed.

The evidence of identification is assailed, and it is also declared that it can be established that Slater's departure for the United States—a fact on which the prosecution laid much stress—was not a flight, but the carrying out of a plan which had long been arranged.

Miss Gilchrist, who was eighty-two years old, lived with her maidservant in a flat in one of the best residential neighbourhoods of Glasgow.

SUFFRAGETTES CROWDED OUT.

Arriving outside Westminster Abbey about seven o'clock last night, some 400 or 500 suffragettes from the East End, including Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, who was carried on an ambulance, attempted to enter, but were told the Abbey was already full. Thereupon the Rev. C. J. Wills, a suffragist, began an open-air service in Old-Palace Yard. "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" and other hymns were sung, and the women chanted a Litany praying for votes for women and the saving of the lunger strikers.

After the service, as the procession passed up Whitehall, three women turned into Downing-street, and two of them, Miss Margaret Paterson and Miss Peterson, were arrested.

HOW THE PEER'S WATCH CAME BACK

After the theft it was pointed out that Lord Lonsdale had often helped the families of convicted persons, believing that the men had fallen through circumstances rather than by lack of desire to keep restored out of a feeling of gratifulde among the "boys," who, at the time of the robbery, were unaware of the owner's identity.

Sir John French, Chief of the General Staff, also visited Buckingham Palace at the same time as the Premier, and had an interview with the King. Colonel Seely in the morning also had an audience of his Majesty.

Important conferences took place, too, on Saturday, when the King gave an audience lasting over

FORCES TO MEET AT FOOTBALL.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

ALDERSHOT, March 22.—The statements circulated here that some 10,000 soldiers were about to leave Aldershot for Ireland are unfounded, I have learned to-day on the closest investigation.

There is the usual scene of Sunday calm here to-day—scarcely a soldier, a wagon or a motor-lorry to be seen.

Among the officers and men, however, there is the liveliest appreciation of the possibility of being sent to Ireland.

Late last night a football match between the British Army in England and the British Army in Ireland was fixed up for next Wednesday afternoon.

The Irish team is coming to Aldershot to play the match.

SIGNALLERS AND NURSES.

LIVERPOOL, March 22.—The Ulster crisis is being followed with great anxiety in Liverpool, where 1,500 volunteers are said to be ready to go to the assistance of the Ulster force.

At Easter the volunteers, whose ranks are likely to swell to 5,000, will figure in a great review. An official of the British League for the Support of Ulster is here perfecting arrangements for the organisation of a corps including signallers, doctors and trained nurses.

M.P.'s QUESTION FOR PREMIER.

In the House of Commons to-day the first order of the day will be consideration of Supply, and the Prime Minister will move the suspension of the eleven o'clock rule in order that its discussion if in progress at that hour may not be interrupted under the Standard Order.

Bill.

Among the questions down for oral reply is one by Mr. Fred Hall (Dulwich), who will ask the Premier if he will state the number of troops which it is estimated would be required to subdue Ulster in the event of revolt; what is the number of troops now stationed in Ireland; and if any arrangement has been made for naval co-operation should the necessity arise for armed intervention.

MR. F. E. SMITH STAYS IN LONDON

Apparently undisturbed by the events of the week-end, Mr. F. E. Smith, K.C., M.P.—who was galloper to Sir E. Carson during his recent reviews of the Ulster force—was playing golf yesterday in London with some friends.

CAN YOU LOVE AND GRUMBLE AS WELL?

Criticism Between Sweethearts That Cupid Overhears.

BOOTS THAT PALLED.

Should sweethearts criticise each other—their little faults and defects of personal appearance and adarnment?

Is the course of true love likely to suffer and become stony and rough by such criticism?

necome stony and rough by such criticism?
In a breach of promise case just concluded, one of the excuses put forward by the defendant was that the gril was always trying to correct and had got extremely tired of it.

Sweetheart critics are as old as the Garden of Eden, and from inquiries made by The Daily Mirror it seems that there is a good deal to be said on both sides.

Mirror it seems that there is a good deal to be said on both sides. A well-known bachelor in Stock Exchange circles who has recently become engaged spoke stoutly in support of sweetheart criticism.
"I should feel that I were out in the cold—being neglected—if my fiancée didn't make little suggestions about my personal appearance and habits. I like to hear her criticisms, and I should gexuinely miss them.
"I can frankly and honestly say that I have adopted every suggestion she has made so far. They are quite small things, but they give her pleasure it I adopt them, and it gives me pleasure to know that I am pleasing her.
"My fancée did not like the shape of boots I wore, and she preferred that I should wear a black knitted tie for most occasions. I adopted both these, and I certainly think they are an improvement

ment
"On the other hand, she wears things which she knows I like. Once or twice I have not liked the hat she was wearing. I have ventured to say so, and I have noticed that the particular hat has not enjoyed a very long lease of life subsequently."

NOW HE LOOKS QUITE NICE.

now He Looks Quite Nice.

A woman writer said: "Little everyday criticisms between sweethearts should strengthen the bond of affection. But the little criticisms should be interlarded with little expressions of approval."

If a man or a girl sets tired of such helping criticisms, then you may take it that the affection is really dead-or sairly so.

If it is met done but the affection is really dead-or sairly so.

The bair will immagine a constant complaining effect upon contehls.

The Dairy Mirror also obtained the opinion of an engaged girl. She gave it very frankly:—

"I have been engaged for over two years, and during the whole of that time I have trankly criticised my finance's clothes—and manners!

(From Our Own Correspondents)
PAILS, March 22—After Mr. Thomas F. Corrigan had told of a trial separation between himself and wife which had failed and Mrs. Josephine C. Corrigan had denied in the Supreme Court, New York, that she was a "cold bride," says the New York Herald, Justice Blanchard interrupted with the remark that they both ought to be spanked and threw both of their cases out of court. He denied a separation to Mr. Corrigan and refused alimony to Mrs. Corrigan, who had field a "She was cold to me and refused to kiss or embrace me after the first few weeks of our marriage," the husband testified. LIVERPOOL, March 22.— The first woman's church was inaugurated at Liscard to-day, the opening services being conducted by a woman minister, the Rev. Hatty Baker, of Plymouth.

This novel church, which is to be entirely controlled by women, is not a suffrage church, though the majority of the committee are suffragists; neither is it intended to be an anti-man church. Miss Hoy, the hon, treasurer, says the desire is to reach women generally who are outside the pale of the Church, and the service will be free from dogma.

The Du Barry's Jewels.

The Du Barry's Jowels.

From Brighton a correspondent writes me suggesting that the jewels in the London Museum which were dug up in the City may have belonged originally to the Du Barry who, when she fled to London for refuge, brought with her much valuable jewellery which was afterwards never traced.

I am not sufficient of an antiquary to offer an opinion on this matter, but I do know that it is practically impossible to dig anywhere in the City area without finding some relics of the past.

Interest on Sunken Treasure.

A treasure hunt is a sure bait to attract money from the average human being. Trea-sure companies generally can get their capital subscribed.

subscribed.

Sunken off New York Harbour is an old ship, the Hussar, which is rumoured to contain a million sterling.

Every few years a fresh company is formed to salve this treasure. The prospectuses are always couched in glowing terms. One of the more recent ones stated, as an inducement to investors, that "the treasure to be recovered has been idle for nearly 100 years, and amounts to upwards of £1,000,000 which, at 5 per cent., amounts to (some enormous 5 per cent., amounts to (some enormous amount) of interest in addition."

GOSSI

To-day's Grumble.

The little girl had always been taught that she must be impersonal in her unfavourable criticisms. That was why, the other afternoon, when she broke into the drawing-room conversation with the remark, "Why, she was the ugliest, horridest person I ever saw,' she looked shyly round the room at her mother's guests and added promptly, "present company always excepted."

Sheepdog Instinct.

My story of the Cockney sheepdog that "folded" a white pig has brought me another example of sheepdog instinct.

A friend who owns one of these animals assures me that it is never happy when walking in the country with a party of people unless all are grouped together.

If two or three of a party go on ahead of the others the dog runs after them, barking and trying to shepherd the wanderers back to the rest.

Even in a boat on the river the dog is un-happy if one member of the party is at the bows and the rest at the stern.

Mr. Bennett Scott, the composer of so many popular songs, was telling me something about the song
"trade" on Saturday.

"I've composed and published over 3,000 songs in my time," he said

"When it was a case of bread and butter I used to compose as many as five or six melodies a day.

My first success was 'Darling Mabel.' That was the first song in English in which the chorus contained a complete letter written by one person to another. There have been dozens since."

"The Words and the Tune."

Mr. Bennett Scott,

"Song writing changes in fashion almost as quickly as women's clothes. A few years ago it was a remunerative business to write comic songs for vaudeville comedians. Now there is no money in such efforts. The public wants 'free songs,' ballads and syncopated measures.

"By the way, it is commonly supposed that a tune makes a song popular. As a composer, and not a lyric writer, I can say that this is not true. The words make the success. It is the strong, well-writen lyric that fastens the melody upon the imagination of the

The Right Way Up of the Union Jack.

Lots of people have been getting cross with The Daily Mirror on account of the Union Jack published on the front page on Saturday. The angry ones accuse us of putting it upside down.

To them I would say, firstly, we didn't put it upside down. The flag was photographed at the Ulster Day meeting of the Ulster Unionist Council in September last, and if anyone put it upside down the council did.

Secondly, it isn't upside down. It all depends on where the flagstaff is. In the picture in question it should be on the right-hand side, with the flag blowing towards the left.

Miss Carlotta Addison.

Miss Elizabeth Lee's book, "Ouida, a Memoir," which appears to-day, recalls some curious incidents in the life of that strange Outla was not personally popular. She was too intolerant of other people's failings. Miss Lee quotes one instance. The novelist was invited to dine at a large house, and did not much like the man she sat next to. Accordingly she rose before the end of dinner and took up her position in the drawing-room—languidly reclining upon the sofa.

"If the English Government try to force Home Rule on us," he said to me some time ago, "they will make the same mistake that they made when they tried to force the tea taxes on our American colony.

"Our men are made of the same stuff as the old American colonists, and our troops are Cromwell's troops. They will never sub-

A Stranger in Ulster.

It is over two and a half years ago now that I saw one of the early consignments of arms that were even then being poured into the province.

Some fifty cases of rifles sent from a firm in Wolverhampton were taken in and stored in the cellars of one of the principal hotels. That hotel has acted as a sort of clearing-

That hotel has acted as a sort of clearing-house for arms. They have been taken in there in large quantities and quietly distributed to different centres.

It was in this hotel that I saw a fierce quarrel between two brothers. The cause of the quarrel was that one of the brothers had been seen drinking in the company of a Roman Catholic.

Carpentier and Claude Duval.

That idol of France, young Carpentier, who put up such a splendid fight with Jeannette on put up such a splendid fight with Jeannette on Saturday, is one of the most graceful and chivalrous boxers who ever lived. He is a Claude Duval of the ring, and here is one of his latest adventures.

The other day a big-built, gross-tempered man—he is described as a "huge fellow"—was busy bullying his little nephew, about four years of age. He had bullied the child until it was weeping, when he was surprised to see a slimly-built young man dressed like a dandy in the height of the Parisian fashion, calmly smoking a cigarette and watching the scene. smoking a cigarette and watching the scene.

A Real Hero.

Presently the young man, who wore lemon-coloured gloves, threw away his cigarette. "Don't hurt the child," he said in a mild voice. The "huge fellow" grunted something about "people minding their own business," and then struck the child.

Then the young man, without taking off his gloves, knocked him down. The child's uncle showed fight, and was knocked down again.

This time he got up and began himself to weep.

The young man found by now that he had soiled one of his gloves, so he swore delicately. Then he handed the bully his card. It was the card of M. Carpentier!
Then the uncle wept again, but this time with joy at the honour of having been knocked down by the French hero. It is all very French and charming, isn't it?

WHAT THE QUEEN SAW.

Surprise Visit and Lunch Stout Bottle That Would Not Be Hidden.

The King had another of his busy week-ends After being seriously engaged with urgent affairs of state on Saturday morning, and receiving various Cabinet Ministers. he paid, with the or state on Saturday morning, and receiving various Cabinet Ministers. he paid, with the Queen, an unexpected visit to the cottages which have been built for the Prince of Wales in Cantley-street, Kennington, near the Oval.

"I have bouilt for my son; may the Queen and I come in?" was the King's simple and unaffected to come in?" was the King's simple and unaffected fents. In one flat the housewife was just clearing up the remains of her husband's lunch, in which a bottle of stout had played a central part. She successfully hid the supply bottle from the Queen's sight for some time, but when she had to move to show the kitchen the stout bottle stood revealed.

"I'm so sorry, your Majesties," she apologised, with a rosy blush, "that the remains of But the Queen laughed amusedly, and, touching the King on the arm, she said. "Look here!" pointing to the stout bottle

Before he went the King said, "I am anxious to make provision for the lower middle-class. I am also anxious for the welfare of the working classes, but in London I have realised that a man of the lower middle class finds it is difficult to secure a house within his means which is not too far from the centre."

"I HAVE BEEN A SHUNNED WOMAN."

Mme. Caillaux's Story of the Chill that Came Over Drawing Rooms When She Entered.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)
PARIS, March 22.—Mme. Caillaux, amid tears, told the story of her life to the magistrates at the Palace of Justice yesterday.

For five hours she underwent searching question

For uve nours she underwent searching questioning as to the murder of M. Calmette, the editor of the Figaro. She was dressed in black with a black veil and carried the muff which had served to conceal the revolver with which she killed M. Calmette."

She wept frequently as she related her discovered the conceant of t ceat the revolver with which she killed M. Calmette."

She wept frequently as she related her divorce from M. Claretie and her marriage to M. Caillaux. She proceeded:—

"Ours was a love match. We were married three years after my divorce. Money questions never arose between us, as we had equal fortunes.

"My husband used to take me into his confidence on political matters, and I shared his triumphs, his joys and his cares.

"For two years this abominable Press campaign has been levelled at my husband. Congo colony to Germany, with having sent French gold to foreign countries, and goodness knows what else.

"Ever since the Figaro campaign I have seen in the drawing-rooms of my friends that I have been a shunned woman."

The Magistrate: What was the direct cause of your resolution?

Mme. Caillaux: The letter signed "Jo," which appeared in the Figaro. I knew that the woman who possessed that letter, which was not addressed to me, also had two others written to me by my husband before our marriage. I did not want any more intimate letters published.

"You are not speaking the truth," interposed the magistrate, who pointed out that the editing of the Figaro had announced in his journal that his role was finished, so she had nothing more to fear "I am too tired to continue to-day," said Mme. Caillaux, "I will explain all another day."

OFFICER AS "TOP DOG."

I remember one of the officers telling me that he was "top dog," and that all the officers under him were "ciled."

This statement was made by Sawyer, chief witness for the Crown, who was further examined when the hearing of the Army canteen case was resumed on Saturday at Bow-street.

Nine Army officers and nine civilians are accused of conspiracy in connection with alleged bribes concerning contracts.

Mr. Sawyer, whose examination was concluded after he had spent in all seventy hours in the box, said there was a system of making complaints regarding contracts and the payments to quartermasters were made for the purpose of stopping complaints. The hearing was again adjourned.

WALKING-STICK WOMEN.

Vogue of Jade Ornaments on Crystal Handles-Buttertly Sunshades.

"æsthetic" umbrella is the latest arrival

The "asthetic" umbrella is the latest arrival in London.
This is an elegant umbrella which has no connection with such a clumpy affair as a "brolly "or "gamp." It is the thinanest umbrella ever invented, and rolls up into a very small ever invented, and rolls up into a very small ever design, of crystal or jade on the top, are being sold in West London shops.
A handle of thisoceros hide for a man's walking-stick is one of the acceptable gifts of the moment.
The best tortoise-shell handles are made, The Daily Mirrer was told, of the under shell of the tortoise, because the tortoise-shell in that part is softer and has more colour.
A best quality tortoise-shell handle can be bought for twenty guineas. Sunshades of a novel character have the wire frame covered with cuts silk patterns of the same design at the slike of a parasol cover of the same design at the slike of a parasol cover.
Futurist designs are also seen on sunshades in all kinds of weird styles.

Mr. Riley tells must watch this person, and go to stay at the Hotel for the purpose. Elaine consents and Riley adds: "The woman you are to watch is gatha Edward."

"AN OPPRESSED WIFE."

THE splendour, the comfort and the luxury of the fashionable hotel were something quite new to me. I was arrayed in a costume that cost twenty guineas-never in my life before had I spent more than three or four guineas for a dress! I wore a hat of tegal straw, with a plaited crown of moire ribbon and a bird of paradise plume crossing the

How the fashionable milliner charged five guineas for it I cannot conceive. But I was not amazed at the price—I had stepped into a new world. Until a the price—I had stepped into a new world. Until a few days ago I had been obliged to support our tiny boy and myself on thirty shillings a weekmow for a brief period I was to live regardless of expenditure. L'tasted luxury for the first time, and found little gratification in it. How was it possible when I thought of everything—of the tangle of circumstances, of my singular and equivocal position—how was it possible for me to be happy in circumstances such as these?

Superb Colothes were strewn upon my bed—slike and satin and lace. I had often longed for beautiful things in the past. There is something so confidence-inspiring in being exquisitely gowned—in being able to enter a room in the full consciounsess that not only the men admire one, but that the women will be unable to find fault.

I wondered, as I glanced at the brilliant and beautiful things that by upon my bed, if I had been too the find things that by upon my bed, if I had been too the find things that by upon my hed, if I had been too the content of the transfer of the subject of the subject

The contest was a triangular one.

The contest was a triangular one with the patent for him.

The contest was a triangular one with the patent for him.

The contest was a triangular one with the patent for him.

The awkwardness of the situation lay in the fact that if I accepted Tifany Riley's money, as I was doing, I could not betray his trust!

Suddenly, as this thought came into my mind I found myself face to face, as it were, with a blank wall. It was impossible!

But I clung on. What if by some means as yet unknown to myself I might still sure Robert? Then a thought that had lain dormant for some the patent of the patent was a summary of the patent with the patent was a summary of the patent was a su

A deep sensation of relief came to me, Vaguely I seemed to sense that here was a possible friend. She had moved forward and laid her lean hand on my shoulder.

There must have been infinite gratitude in the eves I raised to hers, for she went on:

"Tell me! Tell me! Do you hate him?" She had, as it were, flung the whole of her personality into the question. She was delving deep into my soul—madly probing to know my thoughts. The feeble, pensive woman seemed to have vanished. I was literally afraid of her!

"Do you hate him?" she whispered again.
"He loves you!" after a long pause.
"He loves you!"
She shot the words at me with the swiftness of lightning
"He loves you."
She shot the face all the startled him?"
She went back to her chair and, dropping into the seat, leaned towards me, breathing heavily, her white face alight and eager.

"Hou hate him, Mrs, Chassilis, and I hate him that him, Mrs, Chassilis, and I hate him that have had to endure. If I were to keep you here all day I could not tell you all the insults and humiliations he has put upon me. I could not picture to you the awill hardness of his heart."

"I like you, my dear," she said, "and we are friends, are we mot?"

"Yes," I answered vaguely.

I returned immediately to the hotel, but that night I failed to see Miss Esbron. I was a little relieved. The strain of the day had been heavy, and I did not know what attitude Miss Fabron would take towards me.

My chaperon and I spent two hours in the pain court after dinner, but here was no sign of his—was a mamerican lady staying in the hotel. She was a good-natured, negative woman, with a lot of money, and took an immediate fancy to me. When I stepped into her sitting-room and into-the hand.

"Well, Miss Graham," she said, "you're just about the prettiest thing I've seen in six months of travel."

What a problem this Dust question is.

It is the bane of both mistress and maid. Do what you will with broom and brush you cannot get rid of anything like the amount that comes in, and you struggle on, sweeping a little every day, turning out a room each week, and after all this effort, as soon as a little sun peeps into the room you realise how dull and dusty everything looks, and then you resort to the annual upheaval of SPRING CLEANING. But the remedy is here. The Daisy Vacuum Cleaner not only knocks all the hard work out of Spring Cleaning, but it keeps your home bright and fresh all the year round.

THE IDEAL MACHINE

VACUUM CLEANER

Remember that the scientific principle upon which the DAISY VACUUM CLEANER is constructed, and which makes it the easiest to work, is patented and cannot be applied to any other machine. THEREFORE INSIST ON THE "DAISY."

WHY HE BROKE IT OFF.

NE of the excuses given the other day by the defendant in a Breach of Promise case was that the girl he had promised to marry had taken to trying to improve him so industriously that he feared, apparently, to be improved off the face of the earth and turned, by the persuasions of true love, into something that doesn't really exist at all, such as an Ideal Husband or a Perfect Man. He could stand no more of So he broke it off.

No doubt the excuse seemed inadequate in law, for what have law and mere human nature to do with one another? Sentimentally it was as good an excuse as could have been produced under the circumstances. For, if a nice girl agrees to marry a given man-to put it with Euclidean exactnesssurely she wants to marry him, and not another sort of man, utterly different from the one she promised to marry? Therefore, when she begins, as soon as they are engaged, to change him from what he was when she is supposed to have fallen in love with him, to what he ought to be now that he is going to marry her, it is "strong pre-sumptive evidence" that it isn't him she is sumptive evidence "that it isn't him she is in love with, but an ideal which he is far from realising. Does he not show modesty in recognising this fact and prudence in breaking off the engagement?

But what is the good of such chop-logic with a nice girl? Naturally she doesn't admit the force of this conclusion. Naturally she claims that she didn't want to transform him, but only to correct him—to modify him here and there in little dressmaking ways: here and there in little dressmaking ways: taking in a piece here and letting out a little there, until the whole man corresponds to the ideal pattern. His clothes were neg-lected and his hat rarely brushed. She at once put that right, and now all his friends admit he's one of the best-dressed men they know. And then he refused to go out much—wouldn't recognise the importance of friends and how necessary it is to know a good many dull people if you want to know a few interesting ones. Now he's out and about all day, or, at least every evening, and, from having been rather silent and something of a bear, has now become quite talkative and polite and knows how to hold doors open and get taxicabs in the rain and secure tables for supper and get good seats

Then moderately shorten the remaining shoots, making the trees look shapely. It is a mistake to prune these roses too hard, as by so doing one only loses blossom. It is a good plan to bend over and coses blossom. It is a good plan to bend over and the first own of the state of the state

"SLOPPY" SENTIMENT.

YOUR correspondent, "Late Victorian," is in a unenviable position, and I do not think the questions he asks need a lot of consideration before giving a reply. We all know that the majority of modern girls "hold peculiar views on most subjects, love, presumably, being one of them; and, when you to his "sloppy sort of complimentary remark" by designating him an "ass" or a "fool," it is pretty obvious that she does not feel for him that amount of affection which he so much desires.

for him that amount of the desires.

At Victorian "drop his "sloppy sort of complimentary remarks" for a bit, and hold his fair one at arm's length. This might, if she has a liking for him, win her affections sooner than he anticipates; at any rate, it would prove to her that he is neither an "ass" nor a "fool."

ALBERT HALL DISPLAY TO BE REPEATED

Demand for Wednesday's Dress Matinee Tickets So Great That Huge Building Has Been Taken for Thursday.

So enormous has been the demand for tickets for the great Daily Mirror Dress Matinee at the Royal Albert Hall next Wednesday that every available seat in the vast building has now been taken up.

The seating capacity of the Albert Hall, apart from some hundreds of private boxes and stalls which are at the personal disposal of their owners, is considerably over 7,000, and not a single one of these seats remains.

Readers (women only) whose requests for seats were received too late will automatically be sent an equivalent number of tickets for Thursday's repeat demonstration to the sent and though on Saturday night—after earmarking Thursday tickets for those it was impossible to find room for at the first demonstration—there were still thousands of free reserved seats left for the repeat display, there is every likelihood of their being quickly taken up. MORE THAN AN "OVERFLOW,"

Mr. Eugen Sandow on Saturday expressed his amazement at the demand for seats "I am, of course, deeply grafiled," he said as many women must be disappointed in not receiving tickets for Wednesday's matinee.

BUSINESS GIRLS' RULES.

Guard Against Irritating Habits That Interfere with Advancement!

Do business girls realise how much some irritating little habits interfere with their advancement?

A woman who began on the lowest rung in the office of a large manufacturing firm and has risen to be the assistant managerss of the sales department has compiled a list of minor rules for the girls under her control.

Shorthand-typists will find them worth study, for she has a splendid record for training this type of worker. This is what she advises:—

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Men and women who suffer from weak nerves, who tire easily, can't sleep, have brain fag, low vitality, general weariness, loss of strength, dulled ambition, lack of will power, or any of those symptoms that so surely arise from poor, unsteady, unstrung nerves, or nerve force run low should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a few days and note results. This preparation is the greatest for putting the good old "pep," ambition, courage, and real vital energy into a tired, run-down, and shattered nervous system.

Here is a test worth trying. The next time you feel tired, blue, or when your nerves are fairly crying out, eat a Sargol tablet. Then wait for just ten minutes, and note results. Sargol seems to go straight to the nerve cell and near the mean tendence of the control of the contr New York, March 21.—A telegram from Port of Spain (Trinidad), March 21, states that General Cipriano Castro, ex-President of Venezuela, whose whereibouts have been unknown for several months, was discovered there last night.

Brazilian securities, however, remained weak, especially the Railway and the provided by North Caucasian Oil shares, which shot up practically 2s. more to 41s. 9d. The buying of these shares is no doubt due to the steady advance in the company's production. For the buying of these shares is no doubt due to the steady advance in the company's production. For the first week this year the output was 6,855 tons, and it has been created in the near future, as several more new increasing almost ever since, being 6,217 tons for last week. Moreover, a further substantial increase is expected in the near future, as a several more new course of the usex few months. Yet two more Rubber companies announced reduced dividends on Saturday. The Gula-Kalumpong is paying a final 5 per cent, making 10 per cent, for the year, against 124 per cent, for 1912, while the Kombok's distribution is reduced from 10 per cent, to 4 1-6 per cent,—or Id, a share! ANSWERS

Insures You On Train, Tram & Bus

THE famous Free Insurance Policy which began in 1889, and under which claims have been paid amounting to £16,600, has now been increased to

FIVE THOUSAND POUNDS.

Full particulars in To-DAY'S "ANSWERS"

POINTS ABOUT OUR POLICY.

DESCRIBING THE PART ANSWERS HAS PLAYED REGARDING RAILWAY I SURANCE.
So long ago as December, 1889, Answers paid its very first insurance claim under the popular policy which has since been regarded as part and parcel of this great home journal.

The claimant was the Rev. Wm. McMullin, then one of the best-known Methodist ministers in Ireland, and the sum of £200 was paid in respect of the death of Mr. McMullin's son, who had been killed on the Armagh line of the Great Northern Railway Company of Ireland.

Since those days, now nearly twenty-five years ago, some sixty claims of varying amounts have been met and paid, representing the astonishing total of £16,600 actually disbursed to claimants under our policy, which covers all that territory embraced in the term "The British Isles."

Our Readers' Security.

Naturally, the story of how our insurance business is conducted cannot fail to interest readers, who are this week presented with a free policy of £5,000 for a fatal railway accident, and it will be well to explain at once that the business is conducted by ourselves, and without the aid of an independent insurance company.

As most of our readers are aware, Answers is the premier journal of The Amalgamated Press, Ltd., and this alone is sufficient security for all claimants.

As a matter of fact, every current copy of the Golden One is an insurance policy, and there are no forms to fill up, or other vexatious restrictions. Carry Answers when you travel, and you are automatically insured.

Another side to the question of our conducting our own insurance business lies in the fact that the actual settlement of claims is based upon the decision of the Editor, and that many of the formalities often enforced by insurance companies are set aside.

The actual routine to be observed in the event of a claim for our £5,000 insurance would be somewhat as follows: The claim, on being received, would have full consideration at the earliest possible moment, and as swiftly as trains would allow, the Editor and one of his staff writers would set off for the scene of the disaster. Here the relatives would be interviewed, the necessary proof be taken, and the whole case dealt with on the spot, so that an immediate decision might be given. Thus almost in a few hours details of the occurrence would be written up for insertion in the number of Answers then going to press, and the cheque would be paid to the next-of-kin. As an instance of the promptness with which claims are settled by Answers, attention may be called to the case of the late Mr. John Cockburn, who perished in the Aisgill disaster last September. At 3.45 p.m. on September 5th, 1913, a claim was received by telegram from the deceased's solicitor in Glas-By the midnight train our secretary left for Glasgow, and on the following morning at ten o'clock interviewed the relatives.

At Short Notice.

Returning to London that night-Saturday -a meeting of our directors was held at 10 a.m. on Monday, at which the secretary made his report, and a cheque for £1,000 was despatched to the widow by the afternoon's post.

In another case, in the autumn of 1912, the wife of Mr. J. M. Rees, of Glencairn, Abergele, North Wales, perished in a railway accident at Ditton Junction. Mr. Rees lodged a claim for £1,000 under our insurance policy, and within two hours of its receipt a representative was on his way to interview Mr. Rees at the Royal Infirmary, Liverpool, with the cheque in his pocket.

Answers is the only weekly journal offering its readers a free insurance policy of £5,000 for a fatal accident; but, in addition, it embraces also insurance for travellers by electric tramear and motor-omnibus, as shown in our announcement, that are the second sec announcement that appears every week, and the offer to passengers other than those by rail is not one lightly to be set aside.

A characteristic attitude of the French champion.

Georges Carpentier, the idol of France, met Joe Jeannette, the coloured boxer, at Luna Park, Paris, on Saturday, when he was beaten on points after fifteen rounds. The young French champion put up a most plucky fight, and the defeat was by so narrow a margin that a verdict of a draw would have caused no surprise.
